THE MIRACLE RIGHT BEFORE OUR EYES

-By Brenda Dwyer

She came prancing into my life on tippy toes. Fluttering fingers danced before my eyes as if to draw me into a world that was obviously fascinating, yet out of my realm of vision. Her perfect features are mesmerizing. Her curled eyelashes are unbelievably long and cover the biggest brown doe eyes you have ever seen; her bouncy curls seem perfect in their formation (think Shirley Temple). Her little lips are often pursed as if she is in deep consideration of something intriguing. Her outward beauty is dwarfed, however, by the tremendous beauty of her inner mystique. She is indeed special in a way that I believe only the angels can truly embrace and understand.

Her world is an envelope of safe retreat ... none of us could ever hope to feel that kind of sheltered warmth. She is incomprehensibly intelligent ... on a scale that can't really be measured and on a plane that is as if it were from another dimension in time.

Her laughter trickles out and then bubbles forth and has you joining in on its joyous cadence. When she sings it is so softly that it is hard to hear but it makes me think of hearing angels sing from a far off distance. How had I lived my life so “cocooned” so much so that it took someone that the world perceives as “cocooned” to set me free? I am learning just how a skewed we are in our beliefs, how prejudiced we have become in our thinking and how ruinous it all is.

This little nymph of a child, a beautiful porcelain perfect child, is touching people in a way that no other person could touch. She is having a great impact on all who come in contact with her. When her parents and I once took her shopping I was privy to watching “heaven at work” as she would focus in on a stranger and then seemingly dance “on point” up to them... as if she is drawn to them ... then she will reach out and touch them softly (and only once) with one little finger and after insuring eye contact she will whisper one solitary word to them, “special” as her smile becomes the sunshine in the room.

She does not know fear. She does not know anger. She does not know hatred. She does not know prejudice. She only knows love, joy, happiness ... and she knows sadness ... for I have seen her beckon strangers down to her so that she could see them at her level and then extend her little hands to softly embrace their cheeks and I have watched her big brown eyes look deeply into their eyes and I have witnessed her tears flow if what she sees within is perceived by her as broken or without hope. She will then leave them by gracing them with one last soft stroke of the cheek and a quick touch to their hand. I'm sure that each and every person she does this to feels they have been touched in a very extraordinary way.

Before her birth I would not have defined my life as missing anything to any measureable degree. I was happy within the nice, tidy little existence we have created. I didn't feel that we lacked anything at all. I felt happy and complete and blessed beyond reason. Our families are all well and happy.

Happiness and good health always seem to be the common measures we all use for how well we are doing. I had no idea prior to her birth that we were about to experience blessing on a whole new level ... one that we never knew existed. She is just one such positioned princess in this world of ours ... there are many more like her.

A child such as this can teach us lessons we never fathomed that we needed to learn.

There is so much more I could write about her. My love for her is deeper than any ocean. My heart swells when I hear her name. I am beyond being proud of her. I am blessed by her in a way that only heaven knows.

Autism may seem as if it's just a scientific label attached to a condition but if you ask me it is so much more ... it is a name that should have us sitting up and taking notice lest we miss the miracle right before our eyes.

The Corner Office:

A word from Bob Dwyer, Jr.

Someone asked me the other day, "what makes your company special?" "What makes you different than other companies?" In a stern voice they went on to tell me that we can't be any different than anyone else. This person was a little upset because they wanted to purchase a new furnace from me but my price was higher than the other guy who was going to do "the exact same thing".

After thinking about this for a moment I asked the potential customer why they just don't hire the other guy if they really believe they do the exact same thing for less money. That person looked me straight in the eye then said "just do the job".

I wanted to share with you a few facts that I shared with this customer:

According to the Department of Energy (DOE) the typical duct system loses up to 40 percent of the energy put out by the central furnace or heat pump. In case you don't understand that let me try to be more precise ...the term "typical" used here is what you should expect. More than likely it is what you probably have in your home now. That system even if it's brand new loses up to 40% of its mass before it ever makes it to your registers!

Now relate that to your cash would you just throw away 40% of your money? (Or 40 cents out of every dollar) test and document duct leakage. The other company said they did too but when questioned further by the customer it turned out they actually couldn't document it because they didn't have the necessary tools to measure with but they could talk about it.

When it came to air duct cleaning they told the customer they cleaned air ducts the exact same way we do but again when questioned further it turned out they used a small portable machine to clean ducts; they did not have a duct cleaning truck which means they had no outdoor containment system therefore the dirty air just went through a filter back into the house. That's not the exact same thing. This customer has a grandchild in the home with asthma and allergies. The other company then said they could sell filters that could filter the air with no problem. The only problem here was that the other company didn't know what size particles were in the air or what the count was and couldn't identify the allergens in the home which are all things you need to know before you can suggest the best filter for their needs. After we spoke with the grandchild's allergist everyone agreed the IAQ system we offered and the filter the other guy sold were not the exact same thing at all. I'm not going to keep going on with this I just wanted to make a point. Educate yourself! Ask questions and know what questions to ask! Know what it is you are buying. With the example I have given you, you can ascertain one thing ... It's (more likely than not) not the exact same thing.

Would you like to be able to sit down with Bob and have all of your questions answered (and even have questions that you should be asking provided to you)? Use the coupon on page 5 and call today and your one-on-one consultation will be a 100% FREE!

This is a dust mite

Facts

35% of the weight of a nine year old mattress is made up of dust mites; their waste and body parts.

10% of the weight of a two year old pillow can be composed of dead mites and their droppings.

Asthma Fact

The number one reason for visits to the emergency room is asthma attacks in children under 10; not heart attacks, broken bones or car accidents.

Radon Fact

Radon is the leading cause of lung cancer in non smokers. Radon is common in Northern Indiana. The EPA estimates that homes in our area will have levels of radon over 4 pCi/l. The EPA recommends action be taken in homes that are measured over that level.

50% of all illnesses are either caused or aggravated by polluted indoor air.

One out of six people who suffer from allergies do so because of the direct relationship to the fungi and bacteria in air duct systems.

Inside The Tea Room

-By Brenda Dwyer

ated from the inside-out. True beauty does not fade with time, it is timeless. True beauty cannot be attained with nips and

?Beauty?

What is beauty? Where does one find it? How does one possess it? Is it external, internal or both? In general, as women, we spend vast amounts of time and money on trying to attain it. This is foolish because truthfully, either you are beautiful or you are not. True beauty is raditucks. True beauty cannot be found in a jar of perfume or in a tube of red lipstick. That which we nip and tuck will one day not only be unable to defy gravity but it will wrinkle and spot. That which we apply to our skin will only cause us angst in the constant seeking of something even more "effective". That which we put on smooth lips today will be patted on lips that lose their smoothness over time. We, as women, need to recognize that beauty is not as rare as we have been led to believe it is. We need to know that all of the methods we use to try to enhance ourselves is all just "smoke and mirrors" ... how will we ever age gracefully if we never understand the real truth? Beauty is attainable ... look in the mirror. Just look into your own eyes. First thing in the morning ... while there is no make-up, nothing hiding your skin ... what do you see? Let us hope that you see a very unique individual who is unlike anyone else ... anywhere. Look closer. Oh, what?! You can't see past your own "imperfections"? YES YOU CAN. (Funny those imperfections; it seems we are usually the only ones who can see them.) What if you hadn't been brainwashed by the media all these years and you were willing to just be YOU? Perhaps it is more personal for you ... perhaps you have allowed someone at some point in your life to define you. It is common for those who don't love themselves to constantly point the finger at what THEY THINK is imperfect in you. You can't see the beauty right there in front of you? YES YOU CAN.

We need to reprogram ourselves to know that what is truly worth our time ... is to stop working on that WHICH IS ALREADY BEAUTIFUL & UNIQUE ON THE OUTSIDE and start working on that which greatly affects/effects everyone around us ... that which is on the inside, in the heart. We need to listen more, gossip less, love more, and laugh more. There are so many things which distract us every day from the true beauty that is right in front of us. YOU ARE BEAUTIFUL ON THE OUTSIDE! YOU ARE BEAUTIFUL ON THE OUTSIDE! YOU ARE BEAUTIFUL ON THE OUTSIDE! Are you beautiful on the inside? If you aren't ... YOU WILL NEVER RADIATE TRUE BEAUTY. Do you possess timeless beauty? It seems 2010 may be a year of reckoning and introspection. Perhaps we, as women, need to readjust our idea of beauty. Over the years I have heard many women proclaim other women to be beautiful, or other "things" to be beautiful. It is so easy for us to see the beauty in the rest of creation- but wouldn't it be nice to realize the beauty within ourselves as well? YOU ARE BEAUTIFUL. Embrace it!

Cowboys and Grandmas

Thump, thump, thump, thump, thump, bumpety bump, bump. He dragged that cowboy doll behind him where ever he went. As he was coming down the stairs I reminded him to be careful with "Cowpow" (his name for his little friend) so that he didn't trip. I heard his exasperated sigh from behind me and a bit of an added stomp, stomp, stomp as he walked.

"Okay cowboy ... do you want to come over here and tell nana what's wrong?" All of a sudden I saw his father's face staring back at me as he pinched his little eyebrows together and then hunched his (once erect) shoulders all in the same breath. He came to a slow stop in front of me. "No, nana" he said almost in a whisper. "Are you sure?" I offered soothingly, hoping that it would break his last bit of will. All of a sudden a little tear poured from the outside corner of his eye and a sniffle was all I heard in response.

"Come on cowpoke ... nana can make it all better!" This seemed to be just the cure ... he looked up at me with the brightest smile and said, "You can nana?"

"Of course I can" I answered all the while hoping I could. Come to find out Cowpow had somehow lost the third button down off of his shirt. As far as I could tell we had two options ... #1 look for the original button (Lord help me! That child had been all over this morning already ... no telling where that button might be or it might not even be here at all) or #2 go to the local ice cream shop, get a nice dipped cone to boost our energy then a swift trip off to the local sewing shop to look for nice new buttons that would be wonderfully appropriate for a cowboy as dapper as Cowpow. I don't even have to tell you which one he chose ... but the ice cream was delicious! It's just sooooo easy being a grandma!

Gourmet Pretzel Rods

Ingredients:

1 (14 ounce) package individually wrapped caramels, unwrapped
1 tablespoon water

15 pretzel rods
1/2 (14 ounce) package candy-coated chocolate pieces
1 1/2 cups chopped peanuts

Directions:

In a microwave safe dish, combine caramels and water. Microwave for 2 to 2 1/2 minutes or until smooth, stirring after each minute. Dip a pretzel rod into melted caramel. Reserve about an inch at the end to use as a handle, and spread smooth with a spatula or the back of a spoon. Attach 12 chocolate pieces, then roll in chopped peanuts. Place on wax paper until set.

FOOTNOTE:

If caramel becomes difficult to work with about halfway through dipping, you can add 1/2 teaspoon water, and microwave for another 30 seconds; but don't keep microwaving or the caramel gets ruined. You may use candy making white or milk chocolate ... melt according to package directions then dip pretzels as they are or you can dip them in the caramel first then the candied chocolate ... garnish with any sprinkles or candy coatings you wish or drizzle them with melted candied chocolate.

Discover ...

The water draws me to it like a moth to a flame. Today's eyeball forecast is sunny with a high of at least 79 ... wakes are 1 to 2 footers. It's another quiet, beautiful, restorative day on Lake Michigan. I can see the children up on the break wall. Some of them are learning to fish for the first time. Their parents have probably been fishing this wall since they were that age.

Boats pass back and forth through the port entry. I especially love the huge motor yachts although the sailing yachts are equally graceful. Everyone looks so happy, so rested, so tanned.

Just down the beach I can see a couple with their very content Labrador ... it darts in and out of the water with total abandon. Everyone here understands that feeling. There is nothing that I know of that compares to this place ... this life ... this feeling.

I often ponder that we have so much to enjoy right here in our own back yards. Why, you don't have to travel to Lake Michigan to enjoy this same type of exuberant feeling ... if you're a water person there are lakes and rivers aplenty right here! If you're a land person then we have enough hiking trails to put national parks to shame. Bikers have a challenging terrain right here to accommodate their goals as well. There is something for everyone right here and when time allows there is even more to discover "right around the corner"!
